Human Sexuality 101: The Fundamentals for Working With Children & Families

2 hr. virtual session
October 22, 2024 from 1 pm – 3 pm EDT

Do issues and questions about sexuality show up in your work, sometimes when you least expect it? Do you feel that you missed out on good sex education when you were in school or just need a good refresher and update? Are you trying to understand if it makes sense for grade school kids to choose their pronouns? Or do you work with sexually abused children and youth and wonder about the impact on their developmental journey?

This 2-hour course explores the topics of sexual development, anatomy, and physiology, and places them in current social contexts, and will help prepare you to better support your clients as they pass through developmental stages and face challenges along the way.

This live, virtual course is appropriate for social workers, counselors, psychologists, and other human services professionals working with children and families. The training will include didactic lecture, group discussion, and time for Q and A. The workshop is led by a sex-educator/social worker who has been working to promote sexual health and safety for decades! Dr. Rosenzweig will combine important factual material with exercises to help improve your comfort level. Participants will also receive resources they can use in their own practice.

Participants will be able to:

- Describe components of sexual and reproductive anatomy and physiology, and how to incorporate this information into work with children and families.
- Describe the stages of psychosexual development and family development and apply them to problem solving with children and families.
- Integrate the concept of 'sexual climate' in a family or organization into their work and understand how it is critical to promoting healthy sexual development and risk reduction.

About the Trainer:

Janet F. Rosenzweig PhD, MS, MPA - Dr. Janet Rosenzweig earned certification as a sex-educator in 1977 and was recruited to work on one of the first child sexual abuse programs in the US in 1978. She served in high-level government positions in New Jersey, including founding the first Commission on Child Abuse in the state in 1986, as Executive Director of The American Professional Society on the Abuse of Children, as Vice-President for Research and Programs for Prevent Child Abuse America and wrote the book "The Sex-Wise Parent" based on experiences as a sex educator working in sexual abuse prevention. She serves on the Executive Committee of The National Coalition to Prevent Child Sexual Abuse and Exploitation, and as a founding member of The New York State Initiative to Prevent Child Sexual Abuse. She is a Lecturer at The University of Pennsylvania and has provided training across the US incorporating accurate information about human sexuality into work in child sexual abuse and promotes the ideal of parents as primary sexuality educators of their children as a critical protective factor in promoting sexual health and safety, a concept that includes prevention of child sexual abuse.

This training is approved for 2 Social Work CE credits.

Note: This course is offered via Zoom for a $10 training fee, or $20 with 2 CE credits.
